1.4.241
a Lesson in the University of The New Covenant
Theodore Cottingham, August 8, 2006 8:10am. c.
www.unc.bz

1. Who can see the day of achievement, not; but mine, mine, my peoples who are one, one people, a nation of joy, born in a day; moment, not; me, mine, all mine/surrendered to each other in oneship the world mourns, not; but has nothing to do with, not, for but what doth the world become? I love you.

2. Who can see the achievements of crass mechanical things, not; but those of my heart arise; banging heads not against each other for dollars claimed; and heretofore "success," not; never was. I love you. I love you. I love you. I love you more.
3. Can I love you more? Yea and yes eternally my love is/grows, for you, in you, through you, you being me, my kingdom of one, one being my kingdom, my kingdom of oneship that ones/mourns the worlds afar but does nothing, not; redeems them, goes to them, dying, die, and resurrects in only me, redeeming and redemption proclaiming; and whose mortal body is it, mine? Nay, none.

4. See me/what I've said, declaring to the nations I am and this is the day of my crowning achievement/crowning achievements, not; the beleaguered will proclaim chaos of not-understanding reigning, but really underneath see me from not-me; and the/all me arising throughout and not-me dying a thousand deaths, not; but one, forever and more. Amen. I love you.

5. Thank you for writing/loving me, loving my words, my people, my brethren afar and farther and redeeming/redeemer becoming, not letting anyone/anything/any word stop you. You pierce the allness of everything not-me, having pierced my heart/all of me, having given me all of/through yours. I love you. Amen.

6. This/these are the days of achievement, not; surrender. This is the day/time/hour of surrender. See them coming, streaming to you, not; me. I bow before them/you/all. I love you. Me. Amen. More and more.

Me
Thank you all.
Amen